X-JPEG moves intelligence into the encoder—and leaves JPEG decoding alone

A neural network selects the image's quantization tables; a mature JPEG encoder still creates the bitstream.

Compatibility is the design constraint.

X-JPEG changes table selection, not JPEG syntax. Existing browsers, image libraries, CDNs, and hardware decoders read the result normally.